The work waits for the desk. The engineer is somewhere else.

Same Workbench. A smaller screen.

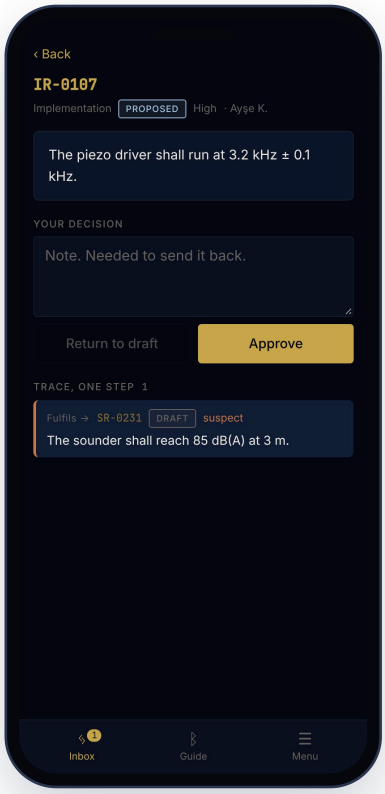

Open your Bifrost address on a phone and it becomes an app: tabs for the thumb, full screen from its own icon. Nothing to download from a store.

01 · INBOX

What waits for you

My work as one list, most urgent first, headed by the assistant's morning digest.

02 · DECIDE

Approve or return

Approve, return or submit a draft, and comment with @mentions. The same history as at the desk.

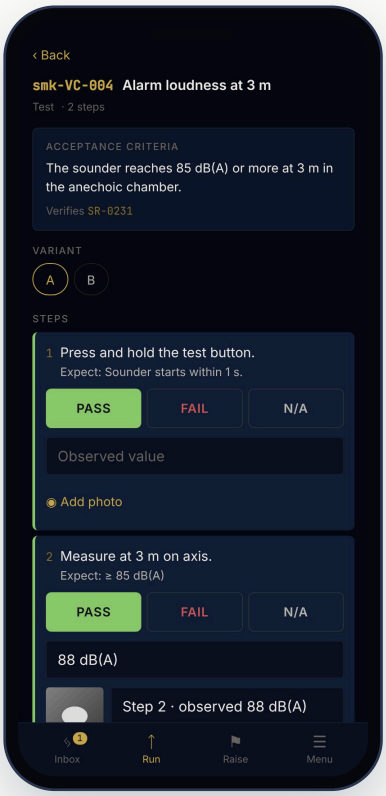

03 · REVIEW

A change request

Word by word, with what a merge would re-check. Yours, a colleague's, or one an agent drafted.

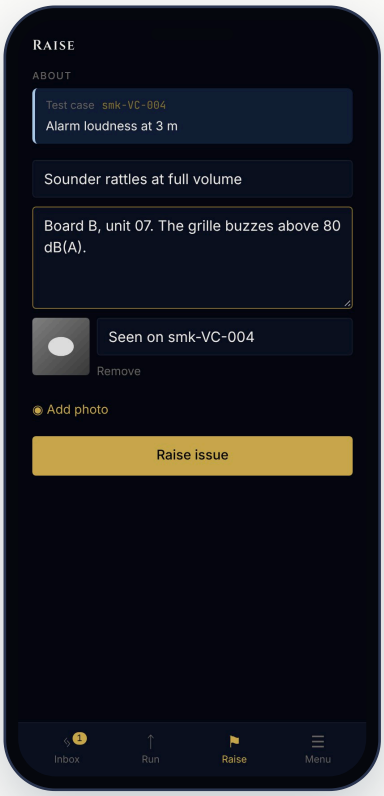

Proof recorded where it is made.

RUN

The test, step by step

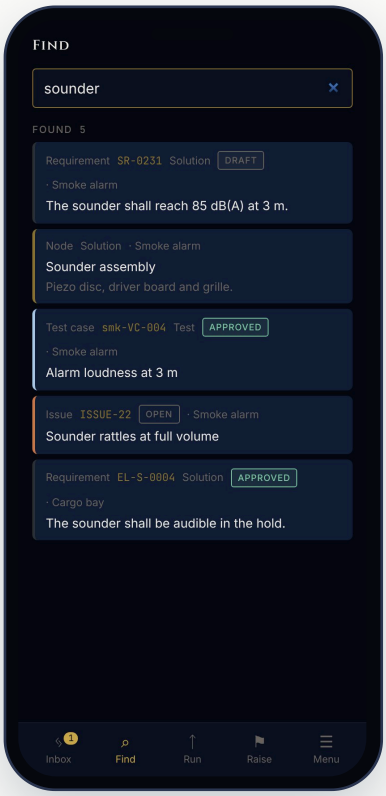

PASS, FAIL or N/A, what you saw and a photo, on the unit you name. Kept on the phone until the run is recorded.

RAISE

An issue, with photos

On the requirement, the test case or the part in front of you. It lands in Changes, photos attached.

FIND

By ID or a word

Requirements, tests, parts, change requests and issues. A requirement shows its whole trace, up and down.

Tags on the hardware.

Sounder assembly
SMOKE ALARM

Print a label for a part and every part below it. Point the phone's camera at it and the part opens with everything that concerns it. Nothing to install.

SCREENS FROM THE SHIPPED WORKBENCH · SMOKE-ALARM WORKED EXAMPLE

One record, wherever it is touched.

The same history

A decision on the phone is the same entry as one at the desk.

Under review

Approved lines still change only through a change request, proposed at the desk.

Told when it matters

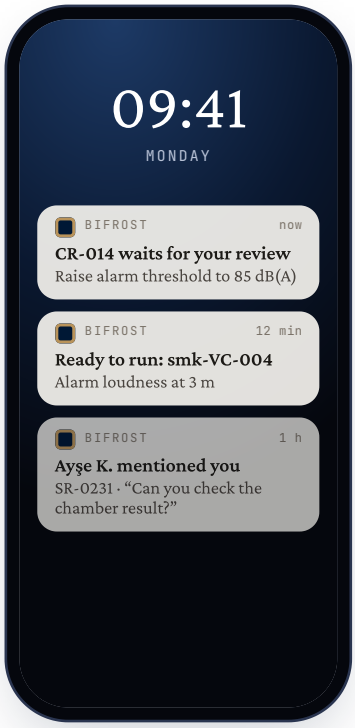

A notification, or a mail if you want one, when something waits for you. Only then.

Signed in, revocable

Remember a phone that is yours. Revoke a lost one from any screen.

Nothing new to deploy.

- Your own address. The phone app is your instance, inside your fence. No store, no second server.
- Updated with the Workbench. Every release reaches the phone the moment it reaches the desk.
- Both editions. In Bifrost Workbench and in Bifrost Lite.

> The phone decides, proves and captures. The desk models.

Put it in a pocket.

We turn it on in your instance and walk your reviewers and your lab through their first day with it.
